

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

delivered to satisfy vendee that contract would be performed. Held: vendee's default, accompanied with announcement of intention not to perform upon agreed terms, gave vendor right to rescind. Johnson Forge Co. v. Leonard, (Del.) 51 Atl. Rep., 305.

The test prescribed by this case for determining whether the right of rescission exists appears to be somewhat unusual. It is stated that if a default by one party is accompanied with an announcement of intention not to perform upon the agreed terms, or is accompanied with a deliberate demand "insisting upon new terms different from the original agreement," the other party may rescind. A majority of the cases seem to warrant rescission upon a default in payment, even where no such intention is expressed or to be gathered from the conduct of the party in default, and upon other and quite different grounds. Kokomo Strawboard Co. v. Inman, 134 N. Y. 92, 31 N. E. Rep. 248; Hess Co. v. Dawson, 149 Ill. 188, 36 N. E. Rep. 557; McGrath v. Gegner, 77 Md. 331, 26 Atl. 502, 39 Am. St. Rep. 415. A few courts, however, in accord with the English rule as stated in Iron Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cases, 434, hold that such a default does not justify rescission unless the acts or conduct of the defaulting party evince an intention no longer to be bound by the contract; (see Withers v. Reynolds 2 B. & Ad. 882) and the principal case is rather in harmony with those decisions. Blackburn v. O'Reilly, 47 N. J. L. 290, 34 Am. Rep. 159; Myer v. Wheeler, 65 Iowa 390, 21 N. W. 692; West v. Bechtel, 105 Mich. 204, 84 N. W. 69; Cycle Co. v. Wheel Co., 105 Fed. 325; Cherry Valley Iron Works v. Iron River Co., 12 C. C. A. 306, 64 Fed. 659. (See MECHEM ON SALES, §§ 1140-1148.) The rule seems just and reasonable, and well calculated to protect the interests of both parties to the contract.

TRUSTS—USE OF TRUST FUNDS BY PARENT—REPAYMENT TO FUND—FRAUD ON CREDITORS.—A debtor, acting as trustee under his father's will for his own minor children, supported them out of the trust funds. Held, that whether the will be construed as clothing trustee with discretionary power as to the support of the children, or as creating an express trust for that purpose, the debtor is not permitted to restore to the trust estate the sums so expended on the plea that he is able and it is his personal duty to support his children, when by so doing he will evade the payment of his honest debts. Natl Valley Bank v. Hancock (Va.) 40 S. E. Rep. 611.

A father, if of ability, is bound to maintain his infant children, even though they may have property of their own. Evans v. Pearce, 15 Grat. (Va.) 513; 7 Richardson's Eq. (S. C.) 105; and this, ordinarily, though there is a provision in the trust instrument for their maintenance, Mundy v. Howe, 4 Br. Ch. 224; PERRY ON TRUSTS, § 612; unless the property is conveyed upon an express trust, one of the conditions of which is such maintenance, when it must be so applied irrespective of the father's ability to support. Ransome v. Burgess, L. R. 3 Eq. 773. When, however, trustees have discretion as to the application of the trust fund to the support of infant children, the father cannot compel its exercise in his favor, nor will the court interfere if they have exercised their discretion. Brophy v. Bellamy, 8 Ch. App. 798. It seems that the tendency now is to look to the circumstances of each case, and authorize the income from estates of infants to be applied to their support whenever it appears to be proper. Andrews v. Partington, 3 Br. Ch. 60, note; Evans v. Pearce, supra. The principal case held that the fund had been rightfully appropriated, and so could not be restored to evade payment of his honest debts by the debtor.

WILLS—REVOCATION BY MUTILATION BY VERMIN.—The statute of North Carolina provides that "no will or testament in writing, or any clause thereof, shall be revocable otherwise than by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing declaring the same, or by burning, cancelling, tearing, or obliterating the same, by the testator himself, or in his presence and by his direction and consent." The testator executed a will and placed it in a wooden safe where it was mutilated by vermin. The evidence showed that he knew of this mutilation, and declared to various persons that he had revoked the will. Held, there is a revocation of a will where it is defaced and mutilated by vermin, and the testator adopts this with intent to revoke the will. Cutler v. Cutler (N. Car.), 40 S. E. Rep. 689.

Similar provisions in the statutes of other states have always been strictly construed and no revocation has been held to have taken place unless the strict requirements as to burning, tearing, cancelling or obliterating have been met. The intent alone does not effect a revocation, unless there has been some act of destruction as prescribed by the statute. AM. & ENG. ENC. OF LAW, WILLS; JARMAN ON WILLS, p. 147. n. This case goes further in a liberal interpretation of the statute than any which has been decided. The evidence showed conclusively that the mutilation was due to vermin. In no sense, conse-